

Rights to Freedom

In open skies, our spirits soar,
Boundless as the ocean's shore.
Freedom's song, a melody pure,
Echoes in hearts, forever sure.

Through whispered winds and sunlit days,
Freedom's grace forever stays.
No chains, no bars, no walls to fence,
Just boundless dreams, in innocence.

In the tapestry of human rights, we weave,
A fabric of justice, where all receive.
Each soul adorned with dignity's embrace,
Inherent worth, no power can efface.

With every breath, we chant equality's creed,
In every act, we plant freedom's seed.
For every voice, a right to be heard,
In every heart, compassion stirred.

No creed, no race, no gender divide,
In human rights, our unity resides.
With empathy as our guiding star,
We walk together, near and far.

For rights are not bestowed, but innate,
In every being, small or great.

So let us stand, in solidarity's might,
Champions of justice, warriors of right.
